

LOUIS VUITTON

MISSONI

SPARKLE PLENTY

If you're not wielding a brush coated in metallic powder, start! Says FACE atelier CEO and president Debbie Bondar, "There's a profusion of metallic eyes this spring, inspired in part by the metallic fabrics that graced many runways."

Of course, the trends stretch beyond basic gold, silver and bronze, venturing into sparkling sorbet hues. Says Tate Holland, president of Make-up Designory (MUD), "They may seem a bit intense at first, but they are actually quite feminine, glamorous and wearable."

If saccharine-sweet tones seem too "sparkle happy" for your more conservative clients, but they still desire a bit of glittering glamour, celebrity makeup artist Debra Macki advises trying metallic neutrals, such as oatmeal, taupe and mocha. "This is a new twist on neutrals," she says. "It's bold and not at all boring."

DICE KAYAK

BALMAIN

FRESH-FACED

Putting your best face forward for spring starts with gorgeous, glow-from-within skin. Bondar stresses this omnipresent trend. "Beautiful, dewy, natural-looking skin is always the most important fashion trend for any season."

Trucco's Daniel likens this trend to spring's renewed sense of freshness. "Keeping the skin clean and natural-looking is the way to go. Stay away from makeup that will give a heavy-textured appearance."